Principal's Message

Our present society possesses many characteristics - some are easily worn, while others may not fit too well. Growth and change are two that we hear about most often. Both of these terms are full of meaning, for our nation, for our community, and for our school.

During Centennial year we had brought to our attention with great impact the outstanding growth and change which has taken and is taking place in our country. We realize Canada is a land having much to contribute to the world welfare.

The growths and changes in our community are manifesting themselves at such a rate that our civic leaders find it no easy matter to solve the problems of such rapid expansion.

Think, too, of the growth and change in and around our school: The Grade 13 students have new and interesting courses with no external examination. Senior students are producing a 45 minute movie (a modern "MacBeth"), while others are taking part in an experimental interdisciplinary course whose theme is "The Quest for a Just Society". This latter group uses feature-length films to integrate their history, English and art courses. Also all the honour students in the school have been issued "Gold Passes" which allows them more freedom to use the library and do research in interesting fields of study. Our new library extension has just been completed too. This addition will give our students an excellent environment in which to study and even more materials to use as it becomes our new resource centre. New growth and change will be even more evident in education in future years - it will be exciting to see them unfold.

Yes, growth and change take place all around us - even within each one of us too! Not one of you is the same person you were when you came to our school. If you accept this fact - and you must do that - won't you make sure that whatever is new is also worthwhile?

Those charged with the responsibility of producing this year book have given us a book in keeping with our school's expansion. I wish to extend my congratulations and thank those who made this year's Griffin something very much worthwhile.

It is my pleasure to once again extend greetings from the Central Peel District High School Board.

The time and effort expended by the students and staff in providing leadership and instruction throughout all the school activities, is much appreciated by your Board.

An endeavour has been made to provide the best in the way of accommodation, and facilities, and it is our sincere wish that all may benefit to the utmost and the school years be most rewarding in every way.

As you proceed towards achievement and success, and you reminisce in the years to come, may the hours spent at "Central Peel" be among your most happy memories.

Sincere congratulations to all on a "Job Well Done".

Chairman.

Editor's Message

Yearbooks are identified as a measurement of time and probably as a chapter in the book of life.

Being parallel to a chapter in a book, something has come before and something is to follow. To previous editions of the Griffin we are indebted for foundations upon which we were able to found our own ideas. To the future editions may our efforts be of mounting value to you.

Central Peel in the last year has excelled in all phases of its activities and will continue to do so in future years; for this is a heritage that we are duly proud.

As the Griffin 1968 goes to the press it is with my earnest wish that its pages are a credit to the unselfish work that a very capable staff has put together; and to them goes my thanks for a very fine job. To our staff sponsors Mr. Van Stralen and Mrs. Saxe also goes a great deal of gratitude and to the many advertisers without whom the Griffin would not have been published.

To you, the Student Body, goes my hope that you will treasure the memories in the Griffin '68 and that you will all find happiness in the future which lies ahead.

In the GRIFFIN 1968 there have been many changes. The form news has been replaced by numerous pictures of school activities.

A special tribute goes to all the members of the yearbook staff. Special mention must go to Maureen Nixon, who spent many long hours on organizing and working on the yearbook, to Brian Trim, our able and very successful advertising editor, to Sandy McLelland our Graduate Editor, to Connie Chapman who gave up much of her time on a variety of jobs and to Jean Kellam our assistant Editor. We appreciate the help of our staff sponsors Mr. Van Stralen and Mrs. Saxe. Thanks also to the advertisers and you, the students of C.P.S.S. who made this yearbook possible.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

In September, the executive of the Students' Council began to formulate a programme of activities. In doing so, we were guided by two main objectives. The first was to introduce as many new and interesting activities as possible. The second was to improve school spirit.

It was on these principles that we embarked and although the waters were often rough, we had a voyage of unforgettable satisfaction.

I would like to thank the students of Central Peel for allowing me to act as President of your Students' Council and extend, on behalf of the executive, best wishes and success to all in the future.

The following were accomplishments of the Students' Council of '67–'68:

a successful Initiation Day and Hat Contest
a night basketball game with the Harlem Diplomats a Grade 12 and 13 Dance
a Football Poster Contest
a Christmas Door Decorating Contest
a Christmas tree decorated by the students a Christmas Assembly
a plaque for the form displaying the most participation
a Formal at Casa Loma
the sitting of representatives from each club on the S.A.C., the standardization among all clubs of money handling, procedures and record keeping the submitting of Constitutions by all clubs the registering of all school activities with the Students' Council improved Students' Council elections
a revised Constitution
an electrically-powered portable speaker
a successful fund raising week
a Computer Dance
a "Concert" at the Election Dance

This year also saw:

earlier dismissal for football games
more night basketball games and the Prefects assuming more responsibility

Valedictory Address

David Rudge

It was approximately five years and four months ago when we first entered these halls of learning. At that time we were shy, young, unassuming and probably quite nervous individuals. Entering grade nine was an experience. But that soon changed. The years passed, all too quickly it seems, and now here we are reunited for the last time. We're not shy anymore. We lost that after the first week of grade nine. We're not as young anymore either for over the years as the school grew we grew and matured along with it. And most of all we're not unassuming anymore. The only thing that hasn't changed about me right now is that I'm still nervous.

And now all we have left of our high school days are those fond memories of former years. Memories of the fund raising campaigns which lead to the support of two Asian students in University, brought in the proceeds for the bleachers which now line the football field, and produced the finances which permitted the dedication of our organ. The John Hicks Memorial Organ. All these were projects in which our school spirit provided complete success time and again.

Memories of the monthly dances in the Gym and the A&W afterwards; and in particular the formals, that big night out when the A&W didn't suffice (much to the displeasure of many pocket books.)

Recollections of the clubs and their activities. The Yearbook, History Clubs and Red Cross club with its blood donor clinic are some of those and of course the Key Club, our newest club, which has furthered the aspect of school life to that of service to the community.

There were the attempts to introduce a little culture into our lives by the music and drama groups who staged their programmes with inevitable success.

And of course there were the sports. Our annual mud bowl game at the red brick place down the road. I see they've finally fixed that football field - they paved it. Our first senior basketball championship after an undefeated season, our track championships, and many more. And all these were culminated yearly at the annual athletic banquet where our successful teams and individual athletes were honoured for their achievements.

All these things which remain so clear in my mind have made Central Peel not just an academic institution but rather a student community of which we have had the good fortune to be members.

One might draw a comparison between life here at Central and the world of science. Picture this; It's a sunny Sunday afternoon and a man is resting in his garden beneath an apple tree contemplating the world around him. This man is Isaac Newton. Now as he sits there a breeze comes up which shakes loose an apple. The apple falls, strikes Newton on the head and drops to the ground.

Well Newton was an educated man, and he knew how to make the best of a situation. Therefore he reached out and picked up the apple and while he was eating it he formulated his theory of gravity.

It's a week later now and again Newton is resting in the garden. As before a breeze blows through the apple tree shaking loose another apple, but this apple doesn't fall. Instead it rises into the sky and as Newton watches a second and a third are blown loose and they also rise instead of falling.

Now because Newton was an educated man he immediately realized that the situation had changed and that his original theory would no longer hold. He realized he must adapt his theory to explain this new observation (and if Newton couldn't explain it I'm sure Mr. Evans could).

My point is this. The scientist must adapt his theory to what he observes. If the observation changes he must adjust his theory.

We too must be able to adapt. We must be able to meet and adapt to new people, to accept these people despite difference of views and thus root out prejudice and discrimination. We must be able to accept responsibility which is becoming an ever increasing part of our lives and we must learn to handle it. We must also be able to adjust to misfortune and deal with it. To be educated we must have more than a knowledge of numbers, more than a knowledge or words, we must have a knowledge of life, of the world and society in which we live and we must be able to adapt and change within this society which itself is ever-changing.

We've learned this on a minor scale during our stay here at Central and this will help us this year and in later years as we further integrate ourselves with the whole of society.

At Central under the able guidance of Mr. McDowell and Mr. Butcher and all the teachers we have had a more desirable environment for the all-round type of education that is so neccessary in today's changing world. Our thanks must go to them for their support over the years. Our thanks must also go to our ministers, our doctors, our friends and all those who have shown confidence in us and given us help—physical, intellectual, spiritual and moral.

And last there are our parents, who have shared with us in our failures as well as our successes, and who shall continue to do so in the years to come. Our parents to whom we may always turn in that hour of need, for encouragement and understanding. (Girls, mother will always comfort you when your husband doesn't understand you.)

And now before I close there is something the graduates themselves would like to say:

I think this expresses our feeling for Central.

So now as we part, some of us to work at chosen careers, others to continue their education, may I say Thank You, Goodbye, and Good Luck to Central Peel.

David Rudge

THE FRAGRANCE OF THE JUNGLE FLOWER

The dawn was just breaking over the green tops of the high luscious jungle trees of the Vietnamese rain forest. The clouds above these trees reflected the brilliant colors of the spectrum, but these colors were softened by a slow-rising jungle mist. The air was fresh and wild and free-smelling. The fragrance of beautiful jungle flowers mingled with the smell of brewing coffee and cooking bacon and eggs. The sun's rays sparkled off bayonets, 50 caliber machine gun bullets and the shells of our 150 millimetre howitzer shells.

As the day lagged on the mist cleared and the day got hotter. Most of the "guys" left the shelter of the bunkers and sandbags to have something to eat or to lie around and smoke or to help stack supplies from the helicopters that came and went in a continuous stream. After a while some of the "guys" played a game of football with an empty 150 mm. shell. A few others sat in small groups thinking and talking about their wives, kids, girlfriends or just simply of home.

After lunch we made sure our defence fortifications were secure, straightened up the camp, then most of us got some sleep away from the hot sun. It would be another terribly uncomfortable night because of heat and humidity.

Late in the afternoon a number of our Phantom bombers flew overhead to attack nearby Viet Cong military positions. We could faintly hear the explosions and a few moments later dark wisps of smoke appeared on the horizon etched against a bright azure sky.

While we ate supper, the 1st Armoured Division and the 3rd Cavalry Division combed the surrounding area with Armed Personnel Carriers (A.P.C.'s) and Fortified Attack Vehicles (F.A.V.'s) for hidden V.C.'s.

Dusk came peacefully and serenely. The sun again, as it had at dawn, made the clouds on the horizon become huge patches of bright colors; red, orange, pale blue, purple, yellow, every color imaginable. As with most evenings, this evening there was almost no breeze. It was still quite hot and getting more humid. A few of the "guys" were saying quiet prayers. All these things added together made a person feel some strange emotion. It was a queer feeling of pride, humility or loneliness or maybe it was something more magnificent, like a closeness to God himself.

Soon it was dark. All we could hear were the wild calls of the jungle birds. Somewhere in the black entanglement of vegetation, two birds were fighting over something or maybe over nothing, like some people say we do. Just the same though the tense, quiet waiting was getting under everybody's skin. A couple of "guys" even started fighting with each other in an attempt to determine the ownership of a picture of the actress, Ann Margret, in a bikini. Everyone grew more edgy every second that dragged by.

Then, unexpectedly and suddenly, 60 millimetre mortars began exploding all around us. White hot pieces of metal from these shells flew through the air. Small fires started by the metal burned the sandbags in places. Just to my right a new reserve whom I hadn't even met let out a shriek of agony as one of the white hot pieces of metal penetrated his leg, tearing at the flesh and simultaneously burning it till I could smell the acrid odor of burning flesh.

Within seconds of the first shell's explosion, our gun crews started pounding the enemy with 150 millimetre shells packed with high explosives. We were lucky we were close to the sea, because if it became necessary, our battleships could bombard the enemy with twenty-two inch in diameter shells.

After only a few minutes of mortar bombardment the enemy troops themselves became visible across our wide clearing running in their pyjamas and yelling "Die! Yankees! Die! Yankees!" as loudly as was possible under the din of all the huge weapons. Bullets from their guns riddled our sandbags ripping the outer layers to shreds, but we answered them to the tune of 50 caliber machine guns, 70 millimetre mortars, grenades and M-1 rifles.

Our fire cut them down quickly and cleanly. Many of them screamed from pain as our red hot bullets longer than a man's forefinger mangled their bodies into heaps of dying grotesque flesh. But still, others kept coming towards us. More and more our howitzers were lowered to account for "Charlies" advancement. The 22 inch naval shells, and helicopter rockets homed in on the advancing enemy. But still they came. The howitzers were loaded with scatter shells now. Shells used for close range firing, perhaps the United States' greatest weapon against short distance artillery barrages. These shells are filled with long, pointed "spears" of metal which act like shrapnel spreading over a large area. The Viet Cong hesitated for a while, then again they came, forever foreward.

Suddenly, and unexpectedly our huge M-46 Patton tanks came crashing through the trees. Behind them came a number of F.A.V.'s. Both "trackers" pursued the enemy. The Viet Cong called for mortars to try to stop the "trackers" but to no success. The 25 and 60 millimeter guns of the armoured monsters rained down lethal lead on the Viet Cong. The tide had turned by 02:00 hours, the battle was over.

The rest of the night was spent administering first aid to soldiers of both sides. We helped to put out flares so as to direct the relief helicopters in for a landing. Then, most of us slept.

A few hours later, dawn came again. Once more the sunrise was calm and serene. As usual there was a cold mist in the air and we could faintly distinguish the fragrance of flower among the odors of war and death. Then as the day went on we once again dreamed of home and the fragrance of the jungle flowers.

THE FORGOTTEN DEAD

He is dead
For how long now
Two three, maybe four years. I cannot remember
Yet he was my heart's desire
I cannot remember his face
Oh yes he was dark, no fair
I cannot remember;
Yet he was my heart's desire
Oh what a terrible truth
He was my very self
The way he walked, the way he talked
His very breath was my only way of life
But I cannot remember his face

How can I forget one so very dear to me;
He would laugh, I would laugh:
He was sad, I was sad:
I worshipped the very earth upon which he trod,
But I cannot visualize his face,
Yet he was my heart's desire

And now I must face reality
He is gone and no more shall be;
I cannot remember his face
Yet he was my heart's desire;
This reality is hard to face
Upon all my pondering
I cannot remember his face
He has become just one of
The Forgotten Dead.

REALIZATION

The room silently
Awaits a sign of Life
But only loneliness pervades
The still emptiness.
Death rules.

The death of a soul
Hurts the fibre, thread thin,
By which we cling to life.
Once damaged thus severe,
The would may never be healed.

Alone in her solitude
Sits a girl.
A maiden new to pain, and sorrow, and heartbreak.
Waiting for the time when
She will bring forth their child.

He was so afraid for her.
He said that he loved her and
She believed.
An Abortion? Never. She is Catholic.
Give it away, said Society.

But she knew within her heart
That never could she bear to part
With that one life thus created.
And yet, when she had asked him
What to do, he couldn't answer.

She went away, where no one
But the few in charge
Knew, or cared about her.
And though they tried,
They could not take his place.

Life went on without her.
She was but one misguided soul
Amongst thousands.
And she pined for the life
That could never be.

The life of having fun, being free and gay
And living only for each day.
And she knew within her heart
That Society would have no part
Of this young unwed mother.

And life went on without her,
And the flame within burned low.
Until one day, not long before the birth
Of that young one for whom she had suffered
So much, a knock announced his arrival.

He came. She could only stare mutely,
A statue in her motionlessness,
Though in her heart she rejoiced.
And the threads of life joined,
And life began.

He looked, then gathered her in his arms.
And all he said when he spoke
Was all she had longed to hear.
And she knew that Hope was there,
And the flame burned bright.

FATE

I opened my eyes and looked around the room where I lay. The doctor had told me the truth. I had been shot in the chest and was about to die.

The thought of what would happen to me after I died was unbearable. I had lived only nineteen years, but the crimes and sins I had committed were more than an average person would in five lifetimes. I had led this terrible life and now I was going to be judged for it.

A doctor briskly walked into my room. This didn't bother me, though.

But when I looked at the mirror and the wall I couldn't see him.

The room, bed, and even myself were reflected, but no doctor.

I had become aware that the second he closed the door the whole room began to darken. The man himself seemed to radiate darkness.

Then his white medical tunic darkened to a flat black. Within seconds, it turned into long flowing robes. I studied his face and as I watched, all his facial features disappeared. It was as if they were erased, leaving a totally blank face.

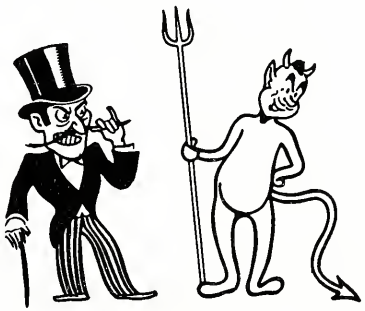

The huge arm bent down and touched my hand. I felt a whirling sensation, then all went black.

I could walk, but there was no place to go. I could feel, but there was nothing to touch. I could see, but there was nothing to be seen.

I was in a colourless, completely empty world, here to wander for eternity.

This is Hell.

A SCARLET FLASH OF PAIN

I still don't understand how it happened. Perhaps if I reconstruct for you those events I do remember, perhaps then I can discover the reason for that tragic chain of events.

It was a soft summer night. The sky was a pale violet colour at first although the sun had gone and the moon was a full disk of silver. So large was that moon, when it first rose, that some of the children were frightened and ran crying to their mothers.

In time, the moon assumed a respectable size; the sky grew dark, the sea became a deep purple. Aboard our little pleasure boat people were relaxing, remembering the exciting highlights of our day-long cruise among the islands. Children dozed on their parents' laps and those people who had shouted, two hours before, now conversed in whispers.

I know I walked around the deck, delighting in the cool off-shore breeze. The night was easily felt; the ship's lights, instead of chasing the darkness away, invited it in. I daydreamed, and a water sprite, somewhere in the darkness that covered the water laughed.

Suddenly the quiet calm of the night was rent by a hollow clank and a long painful wheeze coming from the nether regions of the boat. People jumped up, excited and anxious, demanding in alarm the cause of the noise. We realized the ship had stopped, and were frightened.

The captain came out and told us that something had gone wrong with the engine. It would be repaired quickly; we would not be late docking in the small fishing village from where we had set out, in the morning.

I don't know who saw the freighter first. Someone shouted "Look aft." we ran, suddenly a frightened crowd, and saw a great mass, darker than the sky, with lights outlining the super-structure. It was bearing down at us relentlessly as we sat helplessly in its path.

The captain ordered the engines to be started. We heard the grinding and the hopeful cough, but nothing more. Again and again the men tried, but nothing happened. We saw the captain on the bridge, talking wildly into a ship-to-shore microphone.

The ship was so close to us now we could see the sailors on the deck; it towered over us like a giant over a mouse. When the captain came out and told us the freighter would pass us on our right, there were sighs of relief and a feeble cheer. People returned to their seats, preparing for a comfortable seat for watching the monolith pass by.

But it was not to be. There was the rasping sound of steel on steel, the sound of wood tearing and breaking glass. Then came screams, my own among them. Some invisible force flung me into the water. No more: the rest is a black void laced with the scarlet of pain.

All this has been to no purpose. I still do not know how late I conspired to end our pleasant cruise with ten deaths and twelve more ruined lives. I am glad I am not one of the dead, but I will never walk again or see again. Why? That's all I can do — ask "Why?"

This was our first formal held outside the school and it was a great success.

La Soiree took place at "The Riviera Club" in Norval.

Candlelight, checkered tablecloths and "Earl Ray and his Orchestra" added to the wonderful atmosphere. All agreed that it was the best formal ever.

The highlight of the evening was the crowning of the formal queen. Esther Pontes was a most deserving and radiant queen. Lois Lundy and Jean Dodd were first and second princesses respectively.

Congratulations to the Dance Committee for arranging a great formal.

G.A.A.

The G.A.A. again experienced a successful year due to the never-tiring efforts of the executive and class representatives. Some of our projects included a volleyball jamboree, posture contest, sports' night, Miss Sweetheart Contest, and Athletic Banquet. Our appreciation and thanks are extended to Miss Johnston for her help.

B.A.A.

This year Central's BAA under the capable leadership of Bob Ernst, inaugurated a completely new interform sports schedule by introducing ice hockey and basketball. Sports Night, the Athletic banquet, and Central's invitational wrestling meet, were just some of this year's highlights. I would like to express the appreciation of the year book staff, to Mr. Brown and the BAA, for a job well done.

YES–that's one of the big advantages at

Royal Bank

Royal Bank ranks as one of the world's largest financial institutions, with more than 1,100 branches in Canada and abroad.

Yet each Royal Bank branch operates much like a local business, with a relatively small staff.

This means that in the branch where you start, and others where you'll go for extra experience, your training and progress will be the personal concern of the manager. And he will help and encourage you in further studies, including special bank courses and training schools that give you valuable preparation for a banking career.

YOU CAN AIM FOR THE TOP AT THE ROYAL

Most of our managers came to us right from High School, were put in charge of their first branch by their mid-thirties. Senior officers, right up to the top, started the same way.

At Royal Bank, your aptitude, your desire to work and get ahead, and your talent for dealing with people are the things that count.

Staff benefits include an outstanding pension plan — group life insurance — health and hospital insurance — generous sick leave and vacation policies.

For further details, ask at any Royal branch for our booklet, "Your Future in the Royal Bank". Or have a talk with any Royal Bank manager about the interesting work and the human and financial rewards awaiting you in the challenging, growing field of modern banking.

Central's wrestling teams of years gone by have acquired a record to be proud of. This year has been no exception. At Central's annual Invitational wrestling meet, the first for this year's team, C.P.S.S. placed fourth against an experienced opposition. After the team's first out of town wrestling competition, Central moved to third place.

Library Club

This year, the library club has only eleven members. There are nine girls and two boys from the Science, Technology and Trades course.

Our two librarians are Mr. DeGaust and Mrs. Davidson who both do a wonderful job of helping the members and the students. We also have a new part-time secretary, Mrs. Pope.

This year, a new library building, over seven times the size of our present room is being constructed in the central courtyard. Despite minor delays, we should be moved in by spring. This added space will be of great value in the organization of the library, and will give us a larger working and reading area.

This year, we have changed our constitution to allow students who have been with the library club for two years to receive their library pins. All of the new members will receive a library crest at the end of this school year.

Added to the club as a new interest is the plan for more social outings and field trips for the group as a whole.

We hope that in the future more of the students will join the library club.

Campus Life

The Campus Life Club has adopted a somewhat different procedure than in previous years. It is conducted as a weekly Bible Study. The ringing of Gospel songs, accompanied by the guitar and accordian is enjoyed by all who participate.

Christ said, "I am the Life" and it is our prayer to make Him the Life of our campus.

This year the executive has been:
President: Connie Chapman
Vice President: Grey Seymour
Secretary: Helen Dolling
Treasurer: Dianne Gardner

Our staff Advisors have been Mr. Kidd and Mr. D. Mason.

We took an interesting field trip one Sunday afternoon around Caledon Hills. Some members of the Club enjoyed a weekend at Albion Hills Conservation Area in October. Films were shown at some meetings. The display cases were decorated from Jan. 22 to Feb. 2 by the Club and the theme was based on Air Pollution and the Physical Geography of Canada. The Love Dale Project to India was also completed and was displayed. It was an interesting and eventful year.

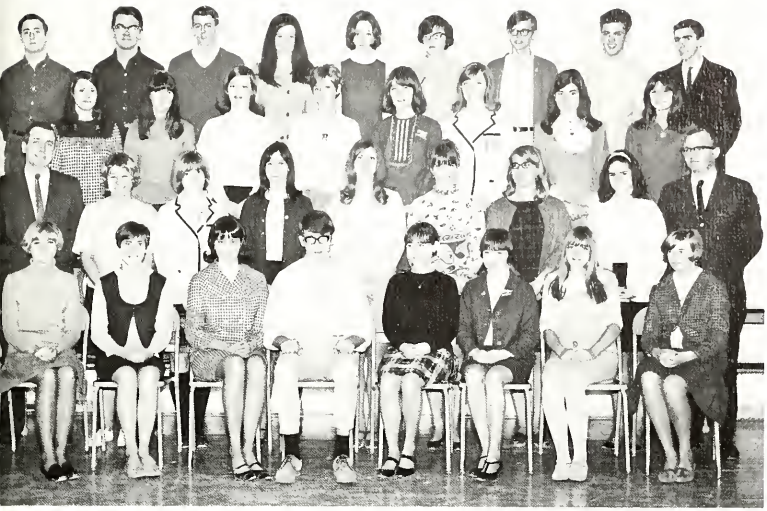

History Club

This year, as always, the History Club has been one of the most active clubs in the school. We began the year by sponsoring four walkers in the Oxfam Walk. The Model General Assembly, held at Georgetown D.H.S. in October, was the first big project of the year for the Inter-Collegiate Council of Halton and Peel (I.C.C.H.P.) of which our club is a member, and for us. In December, the election campaign for the Model Parliament, another I.C.C.H.P. project, literally shook the school, and the election itself was run very much like an election in the "outside world". The History Club participated, in January, in a Model Security Council, at B.C.S.S., for just the four schools in this district. As this is being written in January, other projects--the I.C.C.H.P. Model Security Council in February, the Model Parliament during the spring vacation, a proposed teach-in and a hoped-for field trip--all lie in the future. This year, so far, the attendance at regular meetings is more than three times that of last year (when a turn-out of four or five was common). If we can just hang on to these new members into next year, we could possibly host one of the I.C.C.H.P. functions ourselves.

The club's trip to New York will consist of a train ride from Union Station, Toronto, to Grand Central Station, New York and return; a tour of lower New York city, including a ferry trip to Liberty Island, a visit to the Empire State Building, a tour of the United Nations Building, a free afternoon for shopping, an evening at a Broadway Show, and a stay at the Hotel Piccadilly.

The trip will take place on the school winter holiday. We will depart from Union Station on the evening of March 15 and will return on the morning of March 19. The total cost of the trip will be not more than seventy-five dollars.

The executive of the club are: Pat Keogh (President), Cathy Kane (Treasurer), and Dianne Jackson (Secretary).

The judges were Mr. McDowell, District Inspector; Mr. McKenzie, Superintendent of Brampton Secondary Schools and Mr. Huggins, Business Administrator.

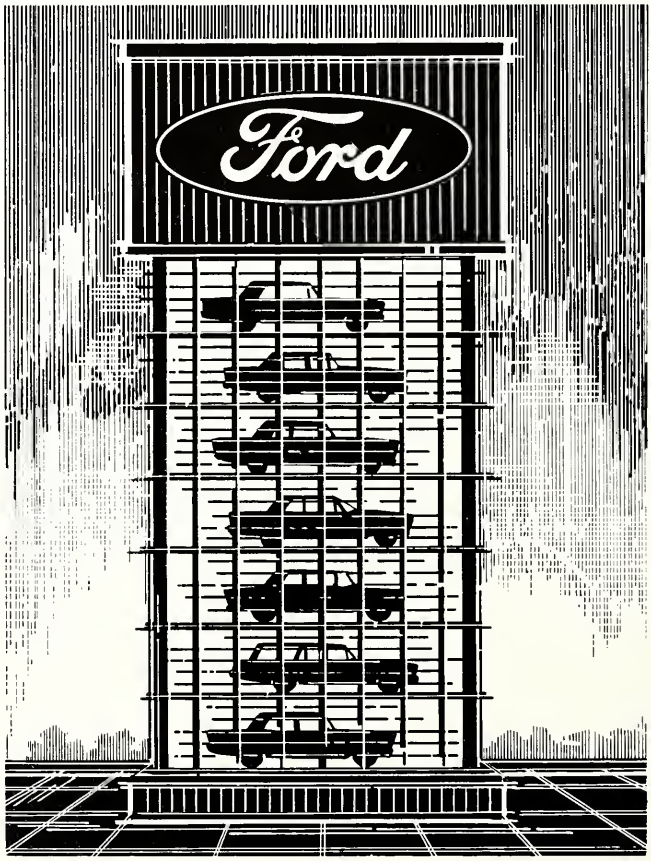

Congratulations go to all the forms participating in these debates and to the winning team of Wendy Laing and David Truman in 5A12D.

The Undergraduates

Another better idea from Ford.

Better ideas count only if you are first. The selectivity tower pictured at Ford of Canada's new St. Thomas passenger car assembly plant is an example. It adds a new profile to the skyline of the Canadian automotive industry. Twelve storeys high, it stacks car bodies for immediate use when required on the final assembly line. It is a better idea – the kind that helps ensure better products.

THE K A O S GANG

When I graduate from High School,

I'd like to work for a large organization — but would I get individual "coaching" to help me move right ahead?

YES—that's one of the big advantages at

Royal Bank

Royal Bank ranks as one of the world's largest financial institutions, with more than 1,100 branches in Canada and abroad.

Yet each Royal Bank branch operates much like a local business, with a relatively small staff.

This means that in the branch where you start, and others where you'll go for extra experience, your training and progress will be the personal concern of the manager. And he will help and encourage you in further studies, including special bank courses and training schools that give you valuable preparation for a banking career.

YOU CAN AIM FOR THE TOP AT THE ROYAL

Most of our managers came to us right from High School, were put in charge of their first branch by their mid-thirties. Senior officers, right up to the top, started the same way.

At Royal Bank, your aptitude, your desire to work and get ahead, and your talent for dealing with people are the things that count.

Staff benefits include an outstanding pension plan — group life insurance — health and hospital insurance — generous sick leave and vacation policies.

For further details, ask at any Royal branch for our booklet, "Your Future in the Royal Bank". Or have a talk with any Royal Bank manager about the interesting work and the human and financial rewards awaiting you in the challenging, growing field of modern banking.

"5B9B"

Come join an adventurous trip into the dangerous depths of 5B9B's all-girl class, on a typical school morning. You may be seated on the floor or elsewhere. JANE will surely have next day's books; so she will race to exchange them. Aha, RUTH is back - she found enough nerve to face 5B9B again. Meanwhile BETTY calmly combs her gorgeous hair, and all eyes are attracted to MARILYN C. LORRAINE shouts across the room about the dance last night. At a before class meeting, our leader, MARG, has full control over the class-or should we tell her? Uproar follows as SHARON H. and CAROL are too busy talking to notice that everyone was standing for the Queen - except them! We now find ourselves in Science-SHRIEK-don't be alarmed! PAM just discovered DONNA on the floor with a snake around her neck and a cow's heart in her desk. CHRISTINE answers a question "I can't hear you. Stand up Chris." "But sir! I am standing." And SHARON HORSEY, Horny, Horns, oh forget it- can't decide how many grams equal 1 sq. in.. Uh-Oh! Guess who just walked past? DEBBIE C. is dreaming past the Math. room. Crash! Bang! she forgot about the stairs I presume! Away goes HEATHER to her regular guidance appointment she never keeps. Eyes of innocence gaze at the Math. teacher. WENDY and DARLENE have had at least a dozen "last warnings" to stop talking! Ah, no time to assign homework. Thanks to VIVIAN we can all sleep for a change. Questions take up a lot of time in Math.! Next class is Typing. MICHELLE-stop throwing that typewriter at gopher-er-CHERYL. And there is SHIRLEY, typing diligently "Dear PAT...! P.E. now! I'm sure we all love that! And there is-going-was JULIE our class athlete. ANDY likes to watch a good volleyball game-the game and not the ball! What style-what grace; as ELIZABETH kicks a basketball pass to DALE-thud. I wonder why DEBBIE O. keeps forgetting that she is to sit in the corner in History-she always seems the first to leave though. KAREN, always overflowing with cheerfulness, just bit her dog, because it bit her first, or was it the other way around? Oh well. Amid the confusion of lunch, MARLENE and JILL still find time to say goodbye - goodbye!
